Compare rates on power

Sophie Smith

A NEW service has been established online that allows people to compare deals offered by different gas and electricity companies.

Enabled by the deregulation of the power industry, Switchselect.com allows bill payers to compare the rates of gas and electricity offered by more than 10 power companies.

Founded by Leon Hayes and Steven Glover, the service aims to offer consumers a better deal.

“Our service is about showing people deals so they can compare them,” Mr Glover said.

“We cannot guarantee that people will save money every single time.

“The reality is though, in our view, that many people are finding a better deal through Switchselect.com.”

A free and impartial service, the online company makes money through fees charged when a consumer switches companies.
